ALCAN MAKES SALES TO COMMUNIST CHINA

Sale by Alcan Aluminum of B.C.-made ingots to China was to be announced this afternoon in a joint statement from Premier Bennett and Alcan president Nathanael Davis.

The premier, Lieutenant-governor John Nicholson, Davis and about 10 members of the Alcan board of directors had luncheon in the Empress Hotel to deal with the announcement and mark the B.C.-Canada centenary.

Details of the announcement were not provided prior to the meeting of Alcan directors, who include one member from B.C., James Sinclair, of Vancouver.

An Alcan spokesman confirmed the sale to China was subject of the announcement. Production of the ingots at Alcan's Kitimat smelter was not expected to involve any new

PEN GUARD WALKOUT HINTED OVER TRIAL

KINGSTON, Ont. (CP) - A spokesman said today "you can't rule out" the possibility of a wildcat strike by Millhaven penitentiary guards if 12 fellow officers now on trial for beating prisoners are convicted.

K. R. Robinson, information officer for the prison guards' component within the PSA, made the comment as the 12 guards went to trial in nearby Napanee on 25 charges that followed the uprising of 500 prisoners at Kingston penitentiary in April.

The charges were laid after some prisoners, transferred from Kingston to the new Millhaven maximum security institution the day the riot ended, claimed they were beaten up by correctional officers in reprisal for holding six guards hostage.

The six guards were released unnarmed after four days of captivity. However, two prisoners died of beatings administered by fellow convicts during the final hours of the riot and a dozen others were injured. Twelve prisoners face trial in connection with the Canvassers will be provided with dog licence tags and receipt books and will be authorized to collect fees and issue licences at the door. You are requested to immediately affix the dog licence and advised to retain your receipt. Your co-operation when the canvasser calls will be appreciated.

The Animals By-law No. 2893 reads in part as follows:

"Any person who owns, possesses or harbours any dog over the age of six months shall obtain a licence therefor in accordance with the provisions of this by-law on or before the first day of February in each year, provided however, that if he becomes the owner, possessor or harbourer of a dog after the first day of February in any year, he shall obtain a licence therefor forthwith."

A dog licence, is valid for the calendar year in which it is obtained. A portion of the fee schedule from the said by law is as follows:

"(1) for every dog over the age of six months:

(a) The sum of $5.00 for each male dog.

(b) The sum of $5.00 for each spayed female dog provided, however, that a certificate from a veterinary surgeon to the effect that a female has been spayed shall be accepted in lieu of the licence fee for the calendar year in which the same was spayed.

(c) The sum of $15.00 for each female dog which is not spayed."

Economics of Addiction

$1 million the illegal street sales value of 11 pounds of heroin seized last week in what is probably the greatest haul of that narcotic in

The size and valuation of the seizure at once indicate the seriousness of the traffic in the drug and one of the major economic factors involved in crime attributable to addiction.

Had the heroin been a commodity legally available under normal marketing conditions, its sales, price would have been a small fraction of the estimated $1 million plus. The price was grotesquely inflated for two reasons - the dependence of addicts on available supplies and the fact that traffickers can exploit their customers beyond all reason because of the black-marketing risks involved.

There is no suggestion here that this hideaous trade is justified. It is important, however, in Canadian studies of the addiction problem ballooning up in all parts of the nation and particularly on the West Coast, that the stark, cruel economics of the situation be understood and the inevitable link-up with crime.

The addict who has to go to the continued deterioration.

POLICE ESTIMATE AT OVER "pusher" for his supply almost invariably runs out of money, partly because addiction interferes with his legitimate earning capacities, partly because the physical body's demand for a narcotic becomes obsessive. When he needs substantial funds to buy supplies, grossly over-priced in the sleazy supply trade, he may be expected to turn to crime. This can vary from serious offences to shoplifting — in which the shop-lifter can expect only a fraction of the market price for stolen goods he resells. With few exceptions, the public pays the costs of this thievery

Heavy penalties against the "pusher" when caught have not, so far, stopped the traffic. The risks are high, the returns high, also. And for many addicts, the drift into "pushing" as a means of meeting his own requirements becomes an all too familiar practice.

A multitude of other considerations enters the narcotic addiction problem. The economics and the crime related to the addict and his dependence on illicit high-priced supplies is nevertheless one which must be considered as studies and experiments proceed throughout this continent in a social area where nothing seems more certain than

Legislative Smog

IN HIS DISCUSSION OF THE firm stand. That is excellent bait for legislation on this page last votes week, Mr. Harold Greer drew attention to holes in Ontario's Enenmental Protection Act.

Like British Columbia's law on the issue, some reserve powers maintained by government appear to contain built-in provisions allowing authorities to grant the right to

How else explain the remarkable reversal of the stand taken on discharge of waste by Sunro Mine into the sea off Jordan River? Here was a case in which the mining interests were first refused permission, then were granted it. Rationalization is taxed to the utmost to explain such an about-face.

The governments of British Columbia and Ontario seem to be demonstrating in the clearest way possible some of the difficulties which enter the fight against pollution when it reaches othe political level. It is good politics in today's climate to take a firm stand against pollution - or at least to strike an attitude which implies a that point.

It doses credibility, however, when discretionary powers retained by government can become discriminatory powers - the powers, for instance, which originally disallow waste discharge into a particular body of water and then permit it.

On what theory are the governments of Ontario and British Columbia working? Do they believe that pollution or non-pollution depends on who causes the release of contaminants?

For all the rhetoric surrounding bills to protect the public interest there seems to remain, in application, an astonishing lack of protec-

Just possibly the flaws here and in central Canada will waken the voting public to the fact that actions speak louder than words. The cynical voter may admit that a bill sounds good. He is, however, going to be more forcefully impressed by how it works. British Columbians, viewing the Sunro case, have before them an interesting revelation on

Man and his Decaying World

MAN AND HIS WORLD, THE Mentreal exposition which blossomed so brilliantly in 1967, shows distinct signs of age and decay. It is succumbing to the fickleness of the crowd and the vagaries of municipal administration. Despite the lifting of gate fees, the overall attendance is lower than last year's and the pavilions, to which a small fee is charged, are attracting fewer people than in 1970. The director of the U.S. pavilion is of the opinion that the biosphere exhibit will be lucky to have half as many visitors as last year despite the fact that this year's presentation is much more elaborate.

One pavilion commissioner expressed this opinion: "Wouldn't it be nicer if everything were smaller and more of a gem-like quality? The world's fair in 1967 had to be big, but now it would make sense to cut down the size of the exhibition and the number of buildings, and make the remaining displays that much more interesting.'

The days when the crowds looked for quantity there are apparently over, the time for quality has arrived. It would indeed be a pity if only some architectural marvel survived as a lonely tribute in Montreal to what had been a thriving cultural masterpiece.

through the government of Ontario. The rest came from student fees, endowment revenue, research grants and miscell a n eous university income. Who, then, should run the University of Toronto? Or for that matter, who should run any of the provinciallyassisted universities, now that they are so dependent on the public treasury

Obviously, the logical and democratic answer, on the principle that he who pays the piper should call the tune, is the provincial government, or some public authority responsible to the government and hence to the voters. The proposition hundreds of millions of public dollars should be annually turned over to private institutions without any public direction or control as to how they may be spent is not only offensive to democracy but politically foolhardy for any government that lets it happen.

Yet to a remarkable extent, that is precisely what has been happening. True, government has retained ultima control through power of the purse, by deciding how much money to give the universities. It also exerts some leverage how these funds may be spent through such overseer agencies as the Ontario Committee on University Affairs. But generally speaking govern ment has been anxious to avoid saving

U of T Example

Nowhere has this been more apparent the Ontario government's approach to the University of Toronto Act now before the Legislature, after over three years of intense campus debate on how that institution should be governed. The University of Toronto, it must be understood; is not a university like the others. It has been from the beginning the provincial university, a rather than a "private" institution: unlike the other universities in the ice, the government has appointed all of its Board of Governors and some of their key functions have been subject to government approval.

Now all that is being swept away and no one has been more anxious to wield the broom than the Ontario government. University Affairs Minister John White invented new parliamentary ter minology to diminish the government's responsibility for determining how the university should be run. The first draft his bill was an "exposure draft" which he said the university community could examine and comment on. This sumably official draft which he said was amendable in almost all respects, and at one point he was proposing "possible amendments" on which a legislative committee heard evidence for days but which were never formally submitted or

Fortunate Disagreement

There was even one day when the power to decide a key question of how many students should be part of the University's governing body rested in effect with a small ad hoc committee of university administrators, professors, student representatives and legislators (excluding the Liberals, who refused to participate). The committee, perhaps ortunately for the principle of responsible government, was unable to come to

What Mr. White and the government were desperate to avoid, of course, was University. Prostrate before the god of university autonomy, the government was prepared to accept almost any form. of university governance that the various elements of the university community could agree upon.

Thus the recommendation of an elected university-wide committee was abolition of the present bicameral

$109,000,000 came White said it was against his better from the taxpayers judgment but he would go along. The committee recommended that most of the persons on the Governing Council should be elected or appointed from within the University and that only onethird of its members should be government appointments from the outside world. Mr. White said that it was insufficient recognition of where the university got its money and raised the figure to 50 per cent. or 21 "public" he included in his 21 seven persons (including the Chancellor) to be elected by the university alumni, leaving the number of persons actually appointed by the government at 14, or one-third as originally requested.

Thus, instead of the University of Toronto being run by 32 governors appointed by the government, a President appointed by the governors and a Chancellor elected by the Senate, it is to be run (at this writing) by 42 Councillors including: 14 persons appointed by the government; 10 professors elected by the faculty; six students elected by the alumni: two administrators elected by elected by the alumni, and two officers of the University federation appointed by the President.

If there is a rationale to this structure, it is obviously the principle of self-government: those who make up the University of Toronto are to be allowed to run it, with a minority of public watchdogs thrown in for dressage. But what is the justification for university self-government? Presumably, although it was never openly stated in the debate here, it is academic freedom. Ironically, academic freedom under the new legislation than existed de facto under the old, where the board of Governors had control over the Senate in most academic matters but did not in fact exercise it.

The old structure, admittedly, has lost its justification. For too long, the Board of Governors at Toronto has been representative of only one segment of society and its principle function, of securing and administering the university's finances, has been superseded by public treasury. But a new structure which does not recognize this basic fact

Misguided Young Man

Perhaps I should address the first part of the letter to the young fellow who wrote to J. Scott.

Young man, you sound to me to be a education which is being wasted). The views you express are extremely selfish and certainly do nothing to enhance the hippie culture to which you belong. You take great pains to point out that we, the straight society, are here to be your servants, to be the cooks, that you in your slothful idleness may eat; philosophy is that of a sick mind (but I'll be charitable and say a misguided mind) due perhaps to problems of an environmental nature. You are not man enough to face up to life. You, young man, are in layman's language "short on guts." I feel sure that as a result of your letter to J. Scott, many young hitch-hikers will find it difficult to get rides. You see you have exposed the low feelings you have toward people who have given you a lift or a meal. Now society is aware that you regard us as marks and you, young man, are a leech and a parasite. I hope that you will change your views toward society — your philosophy is all wrong and can only degrade you and those around you. You'll find that to get anything from this life of ours you must

Black-Topping Parks

Shades of Beacon Hill - here is another of our parks threatened by an invasion of black top!

This Wednesday I understand the Regional Board is to consider access to Witty Beach and one plan entails an approach road bulldozed from the encircling high ground to a parking area on the flats just behind the beach itself.

Surely a wiser plan would be to park the cars on the high ground adjacent the main Metchosin Road. A foot trail and separate bridle path for horses would connect with the beach. This alternative would not only save the ecology of the lagoon but money too! It would also enable the police to keep an eye on the car park and I bet fewer empty beer bottles will end up on the

I am told that the walk to the beach will be a hardship to old people and young children. My answer is that by making things too easy we will be adventure each time they visit the beach and there are already miles of "improved" waterfront roadway in Greater Victoria for the seriously infirm.

This very first point means that. beneath the bland smile of the Indochina Communist negotiators here, they insist It is asserted that no conditions are tional surrender before even beginning to discuss subsequent terms. The approach Van Thieu will be replaced in Saigon as clearly excuses the Communist side from incorporating in any written agreement the unilateral promises they have been making in public. Is it an ultimatum to sign a blank cheque?

Hanoi hopes to emulate the kind of operation Algeria's National Liberation Front succeeded in arranging with de Gaulle. Although French forces reigned supreme on all battlefields, de Gaulle was forced to capitulate diplomatically because there was no longer sufficient support in France's public opinion for any other course and the general was wise enough to know this. Even so, he was able to negotiate a compre basis for withdrawal.

Crumbled U.S. Opinion

American public opinion has crumbled so rapidly and the leadership position of weakened so perceptibly by a mass tendency toward self-flagellation that Hanoi adjudges the time has come to demand a winner-take-all settlement. The Communists haven't won battlefield conflict but they have won the public opinion contest in the United States.

Therefore, more resolutely than ever, they want to extrude American forces, isolate South Vietnam from Washington and force the United States first to change Saigon's government. And they want to seal the arrangement by precluding Americans from "posing any condition whatsoever" in negotiations.

Never before has the United States appeared so nakedly helpless. In the Second World War, 337,649 American men were classified as draft-dodgers. That figure is startling but this time, as Hanoi understands, the whole United States wants to dodge an even more unpopular draft, leaving the U.S. helpless

It might have been more helpful if he'd suggested spending five francs to join Pedestrians' Rights — an association founded eleven years ago by Roger Lapeyre when he realized that, as he it, "People who don't out tires and burn up petrol carry so little economic weight these days that they haven't much chance of Critics of Pedestrians Rights accuse it of trying to impede "progress." M. Lapeyre denies that this is in any way its aim. "All we want to do is to make it clear that once a certain stage has been passed, man ceases to be the master of the machine and becomes its slave.

The dues paid by the association's 8,000 members do not provide enough money to mount a major campaign, but bulletins and brochure and personal letters to cabipropose reserving certain streets for pedestrians.

everything that gives pleasure or promotes trade, has to be profected. Non-utilitarian traffic is against the general interest and only the devel-opment of public transport will make it possible for human beings to retain some degree of mobility."

In its final resolution, last autumn's Berlin meeting declared that the constant in-crease in traffic has become a social scourge — and it recommended many of the remedies advocated by Pedestrians' Rights.

For now, Lapeyre will keep on reminding the government that the pedestrian is not yet extinct, not even the pedes-trian as defined by Pedestrians' Rights: "A man who has two legs and is not have something relevant to say once it began to speak. In particular the second Vatican Council did not by itself work through the fundamental question of the nature of the spiritual life in modern society. The Rev. The Conditioning of the Presidents

The principal findings of the Pentagon Papers cannot be fully understood without some recollection of the traditions, the training and the attitudes of the men who led the United States in the generation after the Second World War.

As the Economist of London has observed, these men were reared in the habits of the internationalist presidents, notably Woodrow Wilson and Franklin D. Roosevelt, who also felt duty-bound to lead the U.S. into war after vowing to avoid it. The British weekly goes so far as to suggest that secret manoeuvre and public deception may be the only way to take great democracies to war.

* * * as Sen. Frank Church of Idaho, one of the early congressional critics of the war in Vietnam, re-marked in Washington the other day, presidents Trun, Eisenhower, Kennedy Johnson were all reared the national interest in a hostile world.

They lived with the memory of Congress destroying Wil-son's League of Nations and hampering Roosevelt's quest for safety in alliances against Germany and Japan.

They lived with the memory of two costly world wars, both of which they adjudged avoidable if American power had been arrayed soon enough against distant aggression

They lived with the nightmare that "appeasement" would invite only more aggression and lead directly to a third world war, as the sacrifice of Czechoslovakia to Hitler at Munich led to the Second World War.

And they lived with the knowledge that another major conflict would be a nuclear war unless it were deterred with frequent demonstrations of U.S. resolve and readiness to honor promises to friends and threats against adver-

Iron Mine Cancellation Big Mistake-Roman

TORONTO (CP) - Stephen Roman, chairman of Denison Mines Ltd., said today Premier Allan Blakeney made a "big mistake" in cancelling an agreement for developing the Choiceland iron deposit in Saskatchewan.

"It was a good deal for all concerned and would have provided a new and vital industrial base for Saskatchewan," he said in an interview. "If the premier wants to listen, we can prove the project is economically sound and our figures are accurate and also prove the information on which the agreement was cancelled was wrong.'

Mr. Roman said it is up to Choiceland Iron Mines Ltd., one of the principals in the project with Denison, to reopen talks with the govern-president of Choiceland, was not available for comment

Mr. Blakeney told a news conference in Regina Friday that his New Democratic Party government had notified Denison and the other principals that it is not prepared to proceed under an agreement signed by the former Liberal government of Ross Thatcher last May.

But he said the government is anxious to discuss with Choiceland officials a more economical approach to de-velopment of the mine. In addition to Denison and Choiceland Iron Mines, principals in the project were the provincial government and Interprovincial Steel and Pipe Interprovincial Steel Corp. Ltd. of Regina

Mr. Blakeney, who led the NDP to victory over the NDP to victory over the Liberals in the June 23 provincial election, said his government was "opting out" of the deal because the "final feasibility report of General Engineering Co... makes it clear this was a hasty deal and, in our opinion, a bad deal"

The premier said the ca tal cost is estimated to be more than $90 million, not $60 million as suggested by the former government, and the estimated cost of producing a ton of iron ore pellets is $43.40. The feasibility report indicated the mine might be able to sell its product at $43,70 a ton at the plant site in 1975.

"With all the uncertainties involved, that kind of margin , too narrow," Premier | his reference to Edmonton. Blakeney said.

Mr. Roman said if the premier was quoted correctly, "he has all the facts wrong." STILL FAVORS PROJECT 'It's ridiculous. The feasibility report was prepared by amateurs who, instead of updating a report prepared in 1967 or 1968, decided to do an entirely new report in a period of three or four weeks.

'We thought it was an economically sound agree-ment when we went into it think we know more about underground mining than the company that did the feasibility report.

"The project called for a lot of work and lots of original ideas. Denison was anxious to get in on a project that could completely change the econ-omy of Saskatchewan.

"Interprovincial Steel and Pipe has said it cannot expand without access to the raw product. Choiceland can provide that. It was planned to sell iron ore to all the Prairie provinces and outside the country as well."

Mr. Roman said a steel firm is essential to the west and "will be evolved in Regina or Edmonton." He declined to elaborate about TACOMA — Gary Kershaw of Victoria emerged as the overall winner of the 2nd Annual International Drivers' Challenge super-stock series Sunday night at Spanaway Speedway, despite finishing third in the main event.

The 100-lap main event, won by Hershel McGriff of Portland, was the last in a series of five races carrying total purse of $16,000.

Doug McGriff, Hershel's son, placed second overall followed, in order, by Harold Hardisty of Medford, Ore., and Butch Bockmeir of Spokane.

Rick O'Dell of Victoria won the fourth race Saturday at Langley Speedway after Kershaw had won the third feature at Victoria's Western Speedway on Friday.

Kershaw finished fifth in Langley despite a broken axle after leading the main from 10th until the 75th lap.

Three Victoria drivers shared the $1,000 contingency money put up by the Firestone Tire Company for competitors using their product.

Larry Walker collected first overall and $500 followed by O'Dell ($300) and Ross Surgenor ($200).

Kershaw, who won the prestigious Permatex 200 earlier this year at Riverside, Calif., was favored to win the series this season.

LONDON (AP) — The annual British migration in search of the sun is starting.

The kids are out of school and along with their parents they will be wrapped up in a tour package and delivered to some hotel on the Mediterranean where the sun shines more, hotter and cheaper.

Q. AND A.

A Charming Relic In Need of Help

Being another session of our Questions and Answers Department:

QUESTION: "In your personal list of favorite tourist attractions the other day you neglected to mention the Point Ellice House, surely one of the genuinely historic sights of our city. Might I suggest a visit to discover for yourself what

ANSWER: My failure to include the Point Ellice House in that short list of recommended tourist attractions was a regrettable oversight and not part of what sometimes seems a conspiracy to deny the museum the full recognition and success it richly deserves.

"Conspiracy" is too rough a word, perhaps, but the fact is that the future of the Point Ellice House and its splendid collection of memorabilia is con-collection of memorabilia is constantly threatened by economic factors that could be solved or eased by a more sympathetic city council. The owners have lost money each year since it was opened to the public in 1967. They can't go on foreverunning in the red.

The importance of the house to Victoria is that it's one of the very few legitimate relics of the past, unlike so many of our created. Disney-like attractions. As a part of our image-making, especially for our image-making, especially for visiting Americans, it's vital that we keep all the authentic buildings we have. That 110-year-old house by the Gorge is surely the most charming of them all.

of them all.

When John and Inez O'Reilly decided to save the place from the industrial sprawl that threatened to engulf it it meant a two-year restoration at their own expense. They'd hardly finished the job before the city resurred them by exerting the city rewarded them by boosting the taxes to a whopping $2,000

Twice this year the O'Reillys (John is the grandson of the original builder, Peter O'Reilly, the province's first gold commissioner) applied to city council for permission to have a mini-bus that would operate a shuttle service from the Causeway in front of The Empress. That's essential because the house is in such an unlikely location that most tourists discover it only by accident. city has turned them down both times.

They've had no luck, either, in persuading the operators of city bus tours to make the museum one of their stopping points. If nothing else it would leave the tourist with the impression that we're not entirely a Mickey Mouse presentation.

QUESTION: "Having read so many glowing accounts of the new East Sooke Park established by the Capital Regional District Board I took my family last Sunday to discover its beauties. The difficulty was that we couldn't find the park much less the beauties. Why, oh why, are the authorities keeping this such a deep secret?"

ANSWER: I put the question to Huntphry Davy, our resident expert on finding secret places, who promptly bundled me into his canoe-carrying car for a visit to what he's described as "the best buy the regional board has ever made." Anyone who finds it will doubtless agree.

You have to drive almost the whole way out the East Sooke Road, past all those "Keep Out" and "Beware of Vicious Dog" signs that mark the preserves of private waterfront-owners. Look for signs saying Timberdoodle Road or Iron Mine Bay Road or Pike Road or, better still, if it's a weekend, a lot of parked cars because already the park has been discovered by many enterprising nature-lovers. The trail once a logging road goes in to your left and is sure trail, once a logging road, goes in to your left and is, sure enough, unmarked.

It's about a 30-minute walk to the first of the many coves and bays that run for some four miles along the peninsula. The old road is delightful, timber-shaded and you may sustain yourself by a feast of fat, juicy salmon-berries, if any are left. You come quite unexpectedly on a meadow, ideal for a picnic, and a small, rugged cove that's as scenic as any on this coast. There are many more ahead if you press on, though the trail from there is harder going.

The people at the regional board tell me that they've deliberately held off with marker signs until a system trails has been completed. There's a crew, including 10 University of Victoria students, hard at work, well ahead of schedule on paths that will provide a circle route and easy access to the beaches farther along. Before the summer is

When the board acquires land from the province the East Sooke Park will comprise 3,000 acres of what is, as Humphry describes it, "the last chunk of sizeable waterfront available

QUESTION: "You will find very few of us in disagreement with your condemnation of Education Minister Brothers and his ridiculous blue-pencilling of the sex chapters in the proposed family life course," writes a teacher. "It was disappointing only that, in describing the methods and results of the system in Sweden, you did not elaborate on the role of average teacher. How went it with them?

ANSWER: None too well, in the beginning, eagerness to avoid making sex education "special" or "apart" and thus give it undue emphasis, the architects of the first compulsory courses decided that they would be given by all regular teachers working to guide-lines, but encouraged to invite open discussion and questions from the students.

Trouble was that few teachers had the know-how, the nerve and the poise to carry it off. In a great many cases. they simply gave biological information from the texts. For many a bachelor and spinster it was an agony. They were handicapped, as well, by a high degree of moralizing by the original authors of the texts who sought, in that way, to placate the churches. This was wholly unacceptable to the students who wanted straightforward teaching rather than will industry prescriptor.

These early troubles - and, remember, this goes back to specialists and texts that dealt more with the clinical rather than the ethical questions. In the classes I observed the courses were very matter-of-fact without the slightest evidence of embarrassment or "talking down" to the

I found it interesting that the students themselves, mainly through the Union of Secondary School Students, had been influential in ridding the courses of a negative, moralizing view of sex and the contradiction, as it was in those early days, of giving full instruction on contraceptives and then recommending continence do it this year, he said, and a $25,000 grant under the Opportunities for Youth program was turned down.

The need for more park space also was evident at the Victoria-operated Thetis Lake facility.

By mid-afternoon Sunday, traffic was hopelessly snarled on the highway at the lake turnoff. Volunteer youths

Williams said the hearings were held in camera with witnesses not able to consult counsel; no written record of proceedings, no crossside in the dispute be-present when one side was testifying. Williams' description of the committee's conduct prompted board chairman Colin McLaurin to comment: "I'm surprised you know as uch about it as you do." Williams said the CAUT committee used the hearings the three professors and sought compensation for research done by them, legal costs and a rewriting of the tenure document. The report was later changed, so much so that Branson said "any similariadded the CAUT investigating team had "fumbled the ball" in making the faulty report. Branson also took issue with the release of confidential information regarding meetings in Ottawa between Uvic administration officials and the CAUT.

He quoted a CAUT document on policy which stipu-lated that secrecy was important in matters of this nature and accused the CAUT of making the "sneak press law," he said. "They (CAUT) can't even live up to the Uvic affair, which supported letter of their own published

"Censure imposed by body like that cannot possibly

Earlier, Williams had brought to the board's attention an article which quoted CAUT president Dr. Gordin Kaplin as saying it is accept able to fire untenured profes-sors without giving reasons. Williams said this was an example of CAUT not acting had asked Uvic administrat-

"I think it would be fair comment to say CAUT has acted with oblique motives in this matter," he said.

Tonight's Top Television Shows

THE LUCY SHOW. 7 p.m., Channel 6; 8:30 p.m., Channel 7. Lucy discovers a potential star. He's a farm boy (guest Wayne Newton) who has a fantastic voice, but only when he's serenading the animals in the barnyard. That's where Lucy finds him, and she decides to take his career in her hands. Woe unto him.

DIANNE HEATHERINGTON. 7:30 p.m., Channel 2. Featured guests tonight are a trio from Vancouver, the rock music Sweet Honey Mead. They offer Play Me a Rock and Roll Song, Sunday Morning and Sometime. Dianne sings Honey Pie, Don't Let It Bring You Down.

GUNSMOKE. 7:30 p.m., Channel 7 (rerun). Matt Dillon has to contend with a pair of despicable brothers. They turn in their elderly uncle for a $50 reward on an old charge accusing him of horse stealing. They use the money to plan a robbery of the freight office in Dodge City.

NBC COMEDY THEATRE. 8 p.m., Channel 5. "In Any Language" Nanette Fabray plays a fading musical comedy star who tries to revive her career and win back her husband (John Forsythe) in the same breath. She goes to Rome to make an "art" film, directed by Aldo Carmenelli (Ricardo Montalban). While there, she learns ex-hubby is about to marry an Arabian princess, and she immediately sets out to win him back.

IT WAS A VERY GOOD YEAR. 8:30 p.m., Channel 4. Host Torme goes back to 1927 when a shy but determined Charles

A. Lindbergh captivated the world by crossing the Atlantic, non-stop, in an airplane, the Spirit of St. Louis. Richard Arlen recalls the first Motion Picture Academy Awards presentation that year, a historic year marked by the first talking picture, Al Jolson in "The Jazz Singer." On Broadway, The hits were "Show Boat" and "The Zlegfield Follies," and in sports, it was the famous long-count of the Dempsey-Tunney fight and Babe Ruth's 60th homer. Mel sings "Lucky Lindy," "Side by Side" and "Thou Swell."

ABC MONDAY NIGHT MOVIE 9 p.m., Channel 4 (rerun). "Who's Minding the Mint?" A very funny pleture, starring Jim Hutton, Dorothy Provine, Milton Berle, Joey Bishop, Bob Denver, Victor Buono and Jack Gilford. Hutton is a U.S. Mint employee, a burgler of the first order who accidentally destroys a load of money. The rest form a motley crew of robbers who want desperately to help Hutton recover the money, but for a different reason. A comedy gem.

MONDAY NIGHT AT THE MOVIES. 9 p.m., Channel 5 (rerun). "Eye of the Cat" (1969), starring Eleanor Parker, Michael Sarrazin and Gayle Hunnicut. Miss Hunnicutt plays a scheming opportunist willing to stop at nothing, including murder, Miss Parker is a wealthy invalid whose one nephew, played by Tim Henry, waits on her hand and foot. The other nephew, portrayed by Michael Sarrazin, has been long-missing, until Miss. Hunnicut searches him out and talks him into a plan to get auntie to change her will. The aunt's pet cats, however, expectedly causes the schemers' downfall.

YOUR HEALTH: Dr. Walter Alvarez

The National Society for Crippled Children and Adults has a pamphlet containing hints for how to behave, "When You Meet a Handicapped Person." The most important thing to remember is that the person with a handleap is still a person; he is like anyone else, except for the special limitations of his handicap.

The handicap need not be ignored or denied between friends, but a thoughtful person will wait until a friendship has been established, and at first will show interest in the acquaintance as a person. If the handicapped person wants to talk about his disability, he will bring up the subject himself. The best thing to do when meeting a handicapped person for the first time is to relax and to talk about the same things you would discuss with you are dining with a handicapped person, don't offer help in cutting his food; he will ask you or the waiter if he needs it. If the handicapped person falls, he may wish to get up by himself, just as many blind persons prefer to get along without assistance. Hence, in many cases, wait for the person's request before giving help; don't shower him with kindness, or be overprotective or oversolicitous. The handicapped person wants to be treated as an equal; he doesn't want sympathy, pity or charity—but a chance to prove himself.

afraid to laugh with him. And most important, if you make friends with a handicapped person, enjoy that friendship; his philosophy and good humor can give you inspiration.

Mayor's Opposition to Hostel Idea Draws Disagreement From Youth Leader Fisherman Jailed One Year for young people here disagrees with Mayor Jim Quaife's contention that a youth hostel is not needed in Duncan.

"I question the need for a hostel in our city because of its proximity to Nanaimo and Victoria (which do have hos-tels)," Quaife said.

"I cannot see the travelling youth en route to Victoria or Nanaimo stopping at Duncan. Each of those two cities will he the bigger drawing card."

Quaife was commenting on a resolution from the recent annual convention of Canadian mayors and municipali-ties in Saskatchewan which favored establishment of youth hostels across the coun-

No Request For Meeting

Shepherd of Vancouver, said today he has not received a request from Labor Minister James Chabot for a meeting to discuss the 42-week strike at the hospital.

Chabot was quoted a week ago as saying he hoped to arrange a meeting with one of the Sandringham owners within a few days to discuss the strike of 28 employees, mem-bers of the Canadian Union of Public Employees.

Shepherd said today that he will "resolve anything any-how." He has said the hospital is operating at a deficit and cannot afford wage increases.

The employees went on strike Sept. 30 seeking a first collective agreement. They proposed a wage scale start-$1.50 an hour, rising to $2 an hour, plus job security.

I am on about the essential meaning of measles, the psychedelic qualities of chicken pox, the very yin and yang of rashdom. Is it not time, I ask myself, that these rash beatitude, before they are put completely out of business by increasingly efficient vaccines and booster

What with all this Ham-letting about, is it any wonder that when my son came home from school last week and showed me, with modest pride, a fine crop of spots along his legs and back, I was (albeit shamefacedly) suffused with a kind of joy? I could feel the blood speeding up, running with a merry murmur along my veins; the latent power so often depleted by ambiguity pumping tri-umphantly into every pore.

Here, for once, was a mothering stituation. Like an ancient warhorse, I pricked up my mangy ears at the strong clear call of the bugle. My child has a rash. My child has chicken pox. We all know is also the only sure time left to the adult female when she can copy, with a clear conscience, her own mother's behavior. Generation gaps too often render grandmotherly lessons obsolete or, at the very least, unfashionable, but there is something soothingly timeless and inarguable about going through the well-remembered motion of tucking up a child in bed, taking his tem-perature, getting him a nice drink and calling the doctor.

My son, too, obviously enjoyed playing his part of the patient, and we entered together the unspoken complicity of illness, our eyes bright, both faintly giggly because rashes, after all, are mild enough things where no one (with a little bit of luck) is going to feel really dreadful.

Nor, deightfully, was either of us responsible for this event. When a child vomits or has a headache, complains of stomach pains or injures himself, the constant burden of responsibility on parental shoulders weighs even more heavily. Did I serve him bad food? Was he reading in a bad light? Is it appendicitis? Could I have prevented his fall? But a rash is an act of God, and a great many times lighter an act than some others He has up His sleeve. The culpa is not mine — I only have the privilege of making the rash better.

The doctor prescribed pills for the itch and they, too, cleared away the debris from the doors of childhood. I lay with the fretted edges of my life smoothed into unimportance, secure from the grown-up proddings of psychosomia (you can't imagine two hundred spots), safe for one week from the outside world that gently rejected me. I could lie there for many more weeks in my spotty skin, scratching occasionally like an absent-minded Buddha, but now, sadly, the spots are receding fast, and only a few scabs remain to remind me that chicken pox at least for me unquiet world.

How to Stop 'Schlock'

from contracting a bad case of "future schlock," media specialist John M. Culkin says cable television may be the answer.

He proposed a non-profit kids' cable channel to provide a quality alternative to network pap.

Culkin, educator, author, film-maker and director of The Centre for Understanding Media, addressed the national Cable Television Association Conventioneers here

The KCC, Culkin said, would be "for, by and about" kids, a means of permitting them to explore and express their own view of the world around them.

He also proposed that it be run on a non-profit basis, to avoid the exploitation for gain that has been the network pattern.

Culkin nited that when we speak of "youth" today 18-to 20-year-olds for instance, we are dealing with the first generation in history that has grown up from the cradle taking television for granted.

This has bred their perceptions and reactions wholly different from those of earlier generations, he said. They are the first true "global citizens," as much at home on the moon as in their neighbor's backyard. Their time sense, merging past, present and future with the flip of a dial, has been completely altered.

Discontinuity, immediate gratification, enormously rapid and dense bursts of information — all this has become second nature for them.

The networks, however, Culkin charged, have gone merry venal way, neither heeding nor adjusting to

"The networks," he charged, have made a ton of "The networks," he charged, have made a ton of money off the kids on Saturday mornings by hawking expensive toys and cereals of questionable nutritional value: In return they have given the kids a handful of specials, as few 'conscience' programs and three vice-presidents. Those interested in the kids today should not spend much energy trying to convert the networks."

Cable systems, with their abundance of available channels, could change all this, Culkin asserted. One way would be to designate one or two channels in each would be to designate one or two channels in each (ranchise agreement as a kids' cable channel, to be used for the finest, most imaginative and most innovative programming that could be found. Culkin also said that the initial investment needed to get such a project off the ground would be quickly doubled by foundations, government agencies and private sources eager to support worthwhile public service

To further implement the proposal, he also put forth several other specific suggestions — the creation of a commission on kids cable channel, composed of experts in television, education and child development; the convening of an international conference to be attended by noted executive favorable. by noted specialists from the world over; setting up training workshops for those who would be responsible for programming for kids, and a program syndication service, to disseminate the best in program material over

One-Parent Family Caught in Middle

TORONTO (CP) - To most enormous task-even when there are two to face the ups and downs. But what happens when suddenly there is only one parent?
Michael Kirton, 39, is in

The Vanier Institute of the Family says single-parent families amount to 8.2 percent of the total in Canada, based on a survey taken in

Mr. Kirton says he has no regrets about separating from his wife. He believes that if the two parents cannot get along it is better for them, the children, if they separate.

His children have all adjusted to the single-parent way of living, he says, and are a great help to him Michael, 15, Cynthia, 14, Colin, 13, Anna, 11, Kevin, 10

With my limited knowledge of French I managed to translate that into a French hour at the tree-shaded park

The idea was first presented to Oak Bay's recreation director Mrs. M. E. Craig by Mme. Roger Simon, whose children (two boys and a girl) all speak French as well as English in the hones. well as English in the home

Mrs. Craig said okay, if Mme. Simon could help.

The result, from the children's and parents' point of view was a success.

"At first when I talked to them in French, all I saw was them in French, all I saw was blank stares," Mme. Simon told me at the graduation party. "Then suddenly, they were following me... using the simple words... enjoying them... and a sking for more."

With the help of her 8-yearold daughter Pascalle, this attractive young woman arranged a program that kept the class busy from 1 to 3, five afternoons a week.

There were games, singing exercises, vocabulary, and some craft work. Lists of basic French words were given to the boys and girls, to illustrate in their own way, in scrapbooks. Posters were designed, using French scenes and words.

second class starts today in the Red Cross room at Oak Bay municipal hall. There will be a third class in two weeks' time. And many of those who took part in the first two weeks are clamoring to continue in the new classes. There's a nominal charge, of course, to cover

Mrs. Craig is so pleased with the result she is hoping to include classes of this sort the fall and winter

Also in the experimental stage "but proving a tre-mendous success," is Windsor Park craft house. On a quick tour of the building I found it humming with activity.

In one room, a group of 9-to-If year-olds was working on ceramics. They meet for two hours, two days a week during a four-week period that ends the first week in August with a display of finished work. In another room a group of 9-to-14-year-olds was busy with leather work. Upstairs more, were learning tie and batik dyeing.

Instruction is also given in cerana craft and macrame (knot-tieing) work.

"We encourage originality in all these classes," Mrs. Craig told me as we looked at a splashy red and white tie dyeing effort made by an 11-year-old.

"This is the first year we've had the craft house and the experiment is so new it wasn't even budgetted.

"However, we're getting so much out of it and somany boys and girls are interested, dollars and cents are of secondary consideration."

Experimental French

classes and the Windnsor Park craft house are only two facets of an ambitious summer program sparked by Mrs. Craig. There's Henderson Park activities where a large wooded area includes a Tarzan swing.

LONDON (AP) — British Defence Minister Lord Car-rington flew to Malta today for talks with Premier Dom Mintoff on a new agreement for British defence facilities on the Mediterranean island.

Carrington headed a team of top advisers including Lord Balniel, his deputy.

It was the defence minister's second attempt to visit Malta. His original trip, fixed for Wednesday last week, was called off 10 minutes before he was due to take off because of a misunderstand-ing between London and Valletta over the scope of negotiations.

The Socialist premier, who has renounced the British-Malta 10-year defence pact of 1954, thought Carrington would be able to negotiate a new agreement on the spot. London made it clear he would have to report back to Prime Minister Heath's cab-

The visit was then rescheduled on the basis Carrington will only discuss the terms of a new accord. At stake in the talks is the At stake in the talks is the future of a British base on Malta which comprises a battalion of troops, two squadrons of planes and naval facilities.

The North Atlantic Treaty Organization has an unofficial headquarters on the island, through its ties with Britain. Mintoff has said he no longer wants Britain's allies to have automatic access to Malta's harbors. He has already asked the U.S. 6th Fleet, asked the U.S. 6th Fleet, which has used the island for recreation, to stay away.

Sexes Divided Over Monarchy

By The Canadian Institute of Public Opinion

Any suggestion that the monarchy should play a less important part in Canadian life, divides the nation equally, with four-in-ten endorsing the idea, and another four opposing it. Two are undecided.

But this national viewpoint depends, in analysis, on whether it is a man's opinion or that of a woman, and where they live. Almost half the male population thinks that its role should be reduced, but less than a third of the women agree. In the Maritimes and the West, majority opinion is that it should be maintained at the present level, with just under half the people of Ontario holding the same view. As would be expected, the majority in Quebec think it should be de-

How Christmas Cacti Bloom Best

By HILDA BEASTALL

Less difficulty with the Christmas blooming cactus would be experienced by house plant gardeners if we realize its native home. This is not a desert cactus. Treating it like one will give poor results.

First let us get the name straightened. out. Only in recent years have botanists and taxonomists examined the cacti and succulents with the idea of re-classifying.

The Christmas cactus was formerly known as Zygocactus truncatus now rechristmas cactus has been given the name Schlumbergera (after Schlumberg) cultivar "Buckleyi." This is according to the Journal of the National Cactus and Succulent So-Hilda ciety Vol. 21, 1966. Our Christmas cactus is found growing in the crotches of heavily foliaged trees on the lower mountain slopes in Brazil. Periods of heavy rain follow periods of drought, but the soil material in the tree crotches holds moisture in decreasing amounts for the droughts. Now the trick is for a house plant gardener in the northern hemisphere with a temperate climate zone to translate all this into terms of growing a Christmas cactus in the house.

If you have a satisfactory method of flowering your own plant, don't change, but if you have difficulties, these clues may give you better results.

Don't overpot your plant; as with the hoys, it will do well if slightly potbound. The soil needs to be rather loose but rich in humus as it would be when composed of tree leaves and particles in Brazil.

I have made a mixture of well rotted compost, a little old cow manure and some rubbed down, dry woods moss.

With a layer of broken clay pot or sharp stones in the bottom of the pot, this mixture provides free drainage and yet has a moisture-holding capacity.

Repotting is best done, when necessary, in March after blooming and just before new growth begins.

During warmer weather, or the period from April to September, Christmas cactus needs watering freely. This means no drying out, yet, of course, no waterlogging. Remember the tree crotch location, where rains would drench the pocket of accumulated soil yet surplus water is at once drained away.

Give dappled sunlight, but mostly shaded from bright sun ring this growing period.

Watering is tapered off by September, until by the middle of that month none is given until the middle of October, when moderate watering is started for the winter months. The plant can then be kept in good light during the day and the home temperature will develop the flower buds to open by December.

As with other plants from near the equator, Christmas cactus likes a short winter day, so keep it away from bright artificial light in the evenings.

One of the conventional bidding gimmicks that has come into prominence during the past decade is the "fragment bid." Its acceptance came about because it frequently enables the users to reach 'makable slams on "distribution" rather than high-card points. The bid is initiated by a double jump in a new suit on the second round of bidding.

Here is an example of the "fragment bid" in action.

A Charming Relic In Need of Help

Being another session of our Questions and Answers Department:

ANSWER: My failure to include the Point Ellice House in t short list of recommended tourist attractions was a regrettable oversight and not part of what sometimes seems a conspiracy to deny the museum the full recognition and success it richly deserves.

"Conspiracy" is too rough a word, perhaps, but the fact is that the future of the Point Ellice House and its splendid collection of memorabilia is constantly threatened by economic fac-tors that could be solved or eased by a more sympathetic city council. The a more sympathetic city council. The owners have lost money each year since it was opened to the public in 1967. They can't go on forever running in the red.

the province's first gold commissioner) applied to city council for permission to have a mini-bus that would operate a shortle service from the Causeway in front of The Empress. That's essential because the house is in such an unlikely location that most tourists discover it only by accident. The city has turned them down both times.

They've had no luck, either, in persuading the operators of city bus tours to make the museum one of their stopping points. If nothing else it would leave the tourist with the impression that we're not entirely a Mickey Mouse

Parks Strained Under Heat Wave

QUESTION: "Having read so many glowing accounts of the new East Spoke Park established by the Capital Regional District Board I took my family last Sunday to discover its beauties. The difficulty was that we couldn't find the park much less the beauties. Why, oh why, are the authorities keeping this such a deep secret?"

ANSWER: I put the question to Humphry Davy, our resident expert on finding secret places, who promptly bundled me into his canoe-carrying car for a visit to what he's described as "the best buy the regional board has ever made." Anyone who finds it will doubtless agree.

You have to drive almost the whole way out the East Sooke Road, past all those "Keep Out" and "Beware of Vicious Dog" signs that mark the preserves of private waterfront-owners. Look for signs saying Timberdoodle Road or Iron Mine Bay Road or Pike Road or, better still, if it's a weekend, a lot of parked cars because already the park has been discovered by many enterprising nature-lovers. The trail, once a logging road, goes in to your left and is, sure enough, unmarked.

It's about a 30-minute walk to the first of the many co It's about a 30-minute walk to the first of the many coves and bays that run for some four miles along the peninsula. The old road is delightful, timber-shaded and you may sustain yourself by a feast of fat, juicy salmon-berries, if any are left. You come quite unexpectedly on a meadow, ideal for a pienic, and a small, rugged cove that's as scenic as any on this coast. There are many more ahead if you press on, though the trail from there is harder going.

The people at the regional board tell me that they've berately held off with marker signs until a system of trails has been completed. There's a crew, including 10 University of Victoria students, hard at work, well ahead of access to the beaches farther along. Before the summer out, they hope to put up the needed signs.

When the board acquires land from the province the East Sooke Park will comprise 3,000 acres of what is, as Humphry describes it, "the last chunk of sizeable waterfront available

QUESTION: "You will find very few of us in disagreewith your condemnation of Education Minister Brothers and his ridiculous blue-pencilling of the sex chapters in the proposed family life course," writes a teacher. "It was disappointing only that, in describing the methods and results of the system in Sweden, you did not elaborate on the role of the average teacher. How went it with them?"

ANSWER: None too well, in the beginning. In their eagerness to avoid making sex education "special" or "apart" and thus give it undue emphasis, the architects of the first compulsory courses decided that they would be given by all regular teachers working to guide-lines, but encouraged to invite open discussion and questions from the students.

Trouble was that few teachers had the know-how, the nerve and the poise to carry it off. In a great many cases they simply gave biological information from the texts. For many a bachelor and spinster it was an agony. They were handicapped, as well, by a high degree of moralizing by the original authors of the texts who sought in that way, to placate the churches. This was wholly unacceptable to the students who wanted straightforward teaching rather than guilt-inducing preaching.

These early troubles — and, remember, this goes back to 1956 — were overcome by more intensive training for teachers, a wider use of sexologists, doctors and other specialists and texts that dealt more with the clinical rather than the ethical questions. In the classes I observed the courses were very matter-of-fact without the slightest evidence of embarrassment or "talking down" to the

I found it interesting that the students themselves, mainly through the Union of Secondary School Students, had influential in ridding the courses of a negative, lizing view of sex and the contradiction, as it was in early days, of giving full instruction on contraceptives The context of the message was that if Uvic president Bruce Partridge wanted to negotiate with the CAUT investigating team, he would

Cable TV Cost Seen Rising $1

New government rules for cable television operators—as they are viewed by some cable firms—are discriminatory and could not be enforced, Les Curran, president of Victoria Cablevision Ltd., said today.

Vancouver cable operators have said the new regulations could result in a $1-per-month rate increase for subscribers, after the Canadian Radio-Television Commission a n-nounced Friday that cable TV would have to pay producers for any Canadian programs they carry.

The commission left pay ment details to be worked out by the cable operators and stations or networks which originate the programs.

Curran noted the CRTC had used the word "urge" in connection with cable operators and producers settling on Special programs, reruns

Curran noted that Victoria Cablevision now spends $75,000 annually on local programming. The lirm also buys unused pilots, programs which failed to get network sponsors and "other material which turned out to be not exactly what the original producer was looking for."

A Vancouver cable operator is interpreting the CRTC ruling as meaning that cable TV will have to pay for all Canadian programming.

But the main reason was conviction that Dr. Weissfloch had a product that would stand on its own.

Ealing Corp. has placed its first order — that $50,000 one — with COPAQ. Others are in the works. From here on it's up to the Weissfloch handiwork to compete in the marketplace. If reaction of scientists at the recent week-long Cana-dian Association of Physicists annual convention here is an indicator, COPAQ prospects appear good.
